Norway Made Snowshoes

Tubbs Factory to Provide Snowshoes for Coming Marathon

Armand Vincent, promoter of the International Snowshoe Marathon has contracted with the W. F. Tubbs Co. of Norway for 300 pairs of snowshoes to be used by the contestants in the Marathon to be staged early next year.

Tentative plans are for the race to start in Quebec or Montreal, then extend over the boundary into New York State and over the Adirondacks to Manchester, N. H. Dates for the International classic will depend on snow conditions weeks ahead of the event.

The Tubbs Co. expect to furnish two dog teams for the event, carrying Red Cross supplies and additional snowshoes for the contestants. Should this materialize the company will furnish the sleds, which have lately been developed and manufactured in Norway, for a practical test under severe conditions.

It is possible a bombing plane carrying Mr. Vincent's representative may fly to Norway near the date of the race. Object would be to pick up seven dogs for one team, transport them to Montreal and land in the arena, just before the starting gun will announce the get away.

Mr. Vincent, who was prime mover in the races from Canada to Lewiston, last winter, had personal experience with the Tubbs Snowshoes. This order is a practical testimonial for the sturdy quality manufactured into the products that attracted the outfitters of the Byrd expedition in providing the Tubbs products for a race to the south pole.

Naturally the W. F. Tubbs Co. feel gratified with the turn of events and will have the snowshoes, according to contract and ready for the marathon.

DOLLAR DAY A SPECIAL EVENT

The annual Dollar Day put on by the Norway merchants, Saturday, was favored by fair weather, which went far to bring trade into town and stimulate buying.

Shoppers assembled early and waited patiently in front of store doors for the opening hour. Naturally the scramble for goods was in evidence during the early hours, then settled into steady business for the remainder of the day, and far into the evening.

Auto traffic was heavy, with Horace C. Kimball, the special officer detailed to keep things straight. He suspended the two-hour parking rule for the day and won many thanks from visitors for this courtesy. Only a few cars were tagged for other misdeeds, but escaped with a friendly warning. No accidents were reported.

Saturday evening was a boomer in a majority of stores. Shoppers and sightseers swarmed the streets and automobiles were packed solid from Advertiser Square to Tannery Brook bridge. By-ways and back streets seemed favorite parking spots for traffic dodgers.

Stores generally report excellent business with some lines more largely patronized.

George B. Barnes Will Practice Law in Houlton

George Butler Barnes, son of Justice and Mrs. Charles P. Barnes of Houlton, formerly of Norway, has successfully passed his examinations for admittance to the Maine State Bar, at Augusta, and expects to open an office for the general practice of law in Houlton about the middle of next month.

Mr. Barnes will enjoy an unusual distinction when he appears at the September term of the Supreme Judicial Court convening at Caribou, the first Tuesday of the month. He will be admitted to practice by his father, Justice Charles P. Barnes, who will open that court.

Following his graduation from Ricker Classical Institute in 1922 and from Colby College in 1926, where he received the degree of Bachelor of Arts, Mr. Barnes matriculated at Harvard Law School.

He was graduated from the Cambridge Institution last June with the degree of LL. B. and since that time he has been engaged in potato inspection work in addition to preparing himself for his examinations.

He has followed closely in the footsteps of his father, who is one of the most prominent jurists in the state. Like him he studied at Ricker Classical Institute and at Colby College, but deviated from the line in choosing Harvard for his legal course rather than study in an office. They were both members of the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity while at Colby.

George Barnes will open his office in the same block in which his father first started practice in Houlton in 1911 and will occupy the office of the late A. L. Lumbert, more recently held by Walter A. Powers.

W. F. Tubbs Snowshoe Co. Purchased by Officials of American Fork & Hoe Co.

Business to Continue as Separate Corporations

Officials of The American Fork & Hoe Company of Cleveland, Ohio, who have been associated with the W. F. Tubbs Company of Norway, Maine, during the past five years under an operation contract, on Aug. 20 completed arrangements and purchased the stock of the local company from the local holders.

The business will continue to be operated as a separate unit and Corporation under the name of the W. F. Tubbs Company as in the past.

The local Corporation officials will be L. D. Gibson, who has been for some time the local representative of the American Fork & Hoe Company, as secretary and Manager; E. L. Aldrich as Vice President and plant superintendent.

W. C. Day has other business proposals under consideration and plans to sever his connections with the W. F. Tubbs Company in the near future.

The American Fork & Hoe Company is a very old Corporation, whose business begimnings date back more than a century. They are the largest manufacturers of Harvest Tools, and Garden Tools in the world.

During the past ten years this large company has been branching out into some other lines of endeavor, notably the manufacture of the very famous True Temper Fishing Rods, True Temper Golf shafts, True Temper Archery Bows, and True Temper Rail Anchors. These new lines have proven to be more than excellent in quality and develop a very large sale indeed.

The acquisition of the W. F. Tubbs Company has been along the line of a broad policy of building up a Sporting Goods division to fit in with the Golf Shaft, Fishing Rod, etc.

The W. F. Tubbs Company, as announced in these columns last March purchased the business of Snowshoes, Skis and Toboggans of the Penobscot Snowshoe Company of Milford, Maine. This combination makes the W. F. Tubbs Company the greatest builders of Snowshoes and Skis in the world today.

The Tubbs reputation for quality has always been paramount as evidenced by the choice of the Byrd Expedition for the Tubbs goods on this most dangerous expedition.

Inquiries have been received from as far South as Patagonia, as far East as Czechoslovakia, and as far North as Nome, Alaska, for the very justly famous Tubbs Snowshoes. The Tubbs Snowshoes have also been chosen by the promotor of the International Snowshoe Marathon to be run from Montreal to Boston and Manchester, N. H., next winter, solely because of the excellence of the goods. He has placed a contract for three hundred pairs of Snowshoes expressly for this race.

The Sno-Shu Chair as developed in the last year by the Tubbs Company has also developed into a very surprising sales possibility. The factory is taxed almost to it's limit in the chair department to fill orders, and when the new line of chairs is placed on the market it is expected that capacity will be more than taxed.

The complete directorate of the Tubbs Company are as follows:
Pres. and Treas.—A. W. Ferguson of Cleveland, Ohio.
Sec. and Manager—L. D. Gibson of South Paris, Maine.
Vice Pres.—E. L. Aldrich of Norway, Me.
Director—R. C. Teft of Wallingford, Vt.
Director—Leslie Drake of Montreal, Quebec, Canada.

CAT MOTHERS YOUNG SQUIRREL

A cat mothering a young flying squirrel along with a litter of kittens may be seen at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Judkins, Pleasant street.

Some days ago tabby brought the squirrel home from the woods near the house. Mrs. Judkins believed the cat had evil designs so carried the squirrel back to a safe place in the tall timbers. Tabby soon found the spot, repeated the trick, and placed the stranger in the box with the kittens. Harmony has reigned ever since.

The squirrel is tame, mixes with family affairs, laps three square meals of milk a day along with the kittens and is perfectly in love with it's foster mother.

LAND MARK GOING

The string of boat houses at the outlet of the lake is being torn down by Luke Morse and the remains carted away by Almore Everett. This familiar landmark contained twelve stalls for water craft, and was built by the late George H. Cole in 1884. The premises have been in constant use ever since, but at last fell a victim to the ravages of time around its underpinning. Mrs. Sarah Cole was the owner of the property. Some of the lumber has been sold to Mr. Tunney of So. Paris and will survive in the form of a garage.

THE LITTLE WHITE CHURCH ON THE HILL

By Mrs. Dana E. McAllister

It's not so much to look at,
This little white church of ours,
It has no colored windows,
No frills, no bell, no towers.

It's just a square, white building
With blinds of modest green,
And long, wide steps before it
And a look of calm serene.

Many years it has stood there
On top of the sunny hill,
And many a time we have entered
Its doors, with a hallowed thrill.

There's many a friendly greeting
In this little white church of ours,
And many a friendly offering
Of hands, and hearts, and flowers.

There's a hush, and a Sabbath calmness
In this little church on the hill
That reminds me of the old folk members
Oh how well I can see them still.

They have dropped out, slow but surely.
And gone to their just reward.
With only a few remaining
To sing praises to their God.

But the summer folks have helped us,
Our pews to fill again.
And sing praises to our redeemer
And join in a blest amen.

And all through the years we have journeyed
Over hills in sunshine and rain.
To hear of our dear Lord, Jesus
And his promise to come again.

And when that bright day unfoldeth
And our Lord and Savior we see,
May we all meet Him in heaven,
For to all His salvation is free.

Carl Sandburg, Poet of America

"Good Morning America," Carl Sandburg's latest volume is a poetical look at the contemporary United States. The title poem starts with a picture of the city of skyscrapers, man's mechanical towers pointing to the heavens. It is a sort of history of "the little two-legged joker's" experiments in the New World culminating with the age of slang and the scurry of workmen building, forever building, building the 'Young Stranger' bigger and better. This 'Young Stranger' is the United States, new and foremost nation in the world, and Sandburg sings of the strength and pride, the depth and shallowness of America. After you have read "Good Morning America" you must either like or dislike both the poem and the poet, for there can be no mean between the two extremes. If you are disgusted with the poem it is because you have realized that Sandburg has pictured America as it actually seems and this cannot be denied. These things are not true of all places in America but on the whole the ideas can generally be applied anywhere, and that is what dismays the person who cares about refinement. That is why such people do not like Sandburg unless they see that perhaps he may help us to change our ways and depart from such ordinary things as slang and foolish fads and fancies.

Aside from this poem there are shorter poems in the book that portray multifarious phases of America. Sandburg takes in all with one huge swoop and that is characteristict of this omnivorous poet. East and West, North and South, rich and poor alike come into poems that teem with an emotion and rhythm that cannot be lost. There is a movement throughout the whole book that is the movement of America herself and you feel that you are a part of it, inevitably drawn in with the rest of Americans. Whether you are a winner or a loser you are included and you must plunge into the great American vortex. Such is the spirit of the poem, "Plunger."

Empty the last drop,
Pour out the final clinging heartbeat.
Great losers look on and smile,
Great winners look on and smile.
Plunger:
Take a long breath and let yourself go.

"TO A PINE TREE"

By Winnie Gray Curtis

Stately creature, in your robe of green,
You stir my soul, whenever you're seen,
Your scent brings quiet to my tired mind,
Your peaceful music, my heart will ever bind.
Oh Pine Tree! I can never tell you
What dear thoughts you bring,
Your slender spills, like beckoning fingers wave,
Dear God, I give thee thanks,
For this pine tree you gave.

TO A RUBY RING

By Winnie Gray Curtis

You are afire
Like a throbbing heart,
You are deep, deep red,
Like wine spilled from a cup
That chrisled there.
Oh! you alive, and burning thing.
Like crimson blood,
Caught, and imprisoned in a ring.
You are fire aglow—blood, wine,
You are, what are you? I know,
You are passion, desire, hate,
You tear my heart with a thousand emotions,
But how I adore you.
And you are mine.

What Uncle Lem Says

It has been stated that there was but one ass in public life in New England, but it seems that there are at least two. Piatt Andrew, Representative in Congress from the Gloucester, Mass., district, rises to state that the President has no right to suspend the building of the cruisers authorized under certain conditions by the 70th Congress. The reply to that is he has on what he regards as good authority. There is not the least necessity for any rivalry between this country and Great Britain in the question of cruisers or any other class of war vessels for that matter. That country could not go to war in its present condition, nor at any time in the future until long after the fifteen cruisers the big navy men want are old junk. Why then build them and waste millions of dollars in their construction and upkeep. The people feel that it would be folly for our administration to talk of securing world peace and at the same time set about building up a big, useless navy. What nation could or would have confidence in the United States? Not one. It looks like good horse sense to use what money would be wasted in building up a big navy, towards paying the national debt.

The question of parity in different classes of war ships and the freedom of the seas, which has been raised by certain congressmen, seems to have been for the purpose of upsetting the purposes of the administration, in its efforts towards establishing world peace. Senator Borah is not an ass, if some little bubs are. He knows what he is about. He evidently means to oppose the President.

The Lewiston Sun has shown that the matter of parity in naval bases between the two nations couldn't be carried out for Great Britain has many more scattered over the world in her colonies, than the United States, which it is necessary for her to maintain and is no menace to this country.

The big navy men opposed President Calvin Coolidge. They are opposing President Herbert Hoover. The great mass of the people of both parties did not like it then, and they do not like it now. If this opposition is kept up, some of the little fellows will find themselves out of a job as soon as the people in their bailiwicks can get at them. If there is any one thing the great mass of humanity have set their hearts upon, it is to do away with war in the settlement of difficulties between nations and uproot the causes of war. Besides, it must be apparent to all unprejudiced people that the peace of the world must depend upon the United States and Great Britain, working in unison.

They are having labor troubles down at Gastonia, N. C., where some mill hands struck for higher wages and in a picketing affair, an officer of the law was killed. Fifteen persons—some of whom are women—are being prosecuted for his murder. It seems that a "walking delegate" from Massachusetts went down there and started the conflict between the workmen and the employers. He had much better stayed at home and permitted the interested parties to settle their own difficulties. The courts appear to be acting vigorously, especially in the matter of putting a stop to the interference of strikers with those who are willing to work. If laborers wish to quit work, they have a right to do so in general, but they should leave to stay quit and not trouble others who take their places, or resort to picketing or any other method of annoyance to laborers or manufacturers. This is the only reasonable doctrine and is generally upheld by the courts.

It is noted that Ex-Gov. Ralph O. Brewster is feeling the "political pulse to see whether it is favorable to his candidacy for the United States senate next year. Well, we will tell him where your Uncle Lemuel stands. On no consideration whatever would we vote for him, for that or any other office. And if he made so poor a showing in his contest last year against the unpopular Fred Hale, it is altogether improbable that he could win the nomination against anyone likely to oppose him.

What a faux pas Mrs. Hoover made in having the negro congressman's wife at tea. The "Solid South" last November was split wide open. Now from the stir the incident made down there, it looks like it's having been closed up again with a snap, and preventing the work there that Lincoln would have done, had he lived. Alas, but women have sometimes made and unmade administrations and even Presidents and would be Presidents.

It very rarely happens in a representative New England audience of ladies and gentlemen that they are shocked beyond utterance by the coarse and indecent remarks of some egregious ass, who is wholly devoid of the fine sense of propriety as well as the character of a gentleman. But such an occurrence, strange to say, actually happened at a meeting of the Rotarians in Portland on Friday, Aug. 16. The blunted moral sensed individual who committed this unpardonable offense came from some place in New Hampshire, where he is said to have a summer cottage. That he was allowed to finish his not fit to be heard remarks without being promptly rebuked and squelched, is evidenced by the general astonishment and shock of his hearers.

—Uncle Lem.

Improvements On Hill—Varney's Trucks Hauling Pulp—Emery Secured Cup.

John Redding, our road commissioner, with a crew of men, made a wonderful improvement on the Linn Farrar hill last week. They drilled about thirty holes in the ledge and loaded them with dynamite, making such a desirable change that you would hardly know the place, and last Friday morning Mr. Farrar mowed his meadow near the mail boxes with a two horse machine. I will gamble that Willie Bowker never heard of such a thing before, though probably Willie has mowed that same meadow by hand for right around twenty-five years. But any old resident will tell you this has been the dryest season during many years.

Alpha Varney, who has a three year lease of the former Martin place, having harvested a heavy crop of hay this season, recently purchased two head of young stock to add to his herd.

Jerry and Lionel Bartlett were at home over Sunday.

Donald Varney's trucks are hauling pulp from the green woods lot when the weather is too wet to haul squares from the birch mill to Locke Mills. And as the case may be when they are all loaded and lined up along the County road with the big fellow in the lead with two and one-half cords of hard wood pulp upon his Reo speed wagon, with three Chevrolets close up, with a Ford bringing up the rear, why they simply jar the ground. Donald has for drivers this season Alpha Varney on the Reo, Charlie Farrar, Clifford Abbott and Reginald Ford on the Chevrolets and David Boyle on the Ford truck.

Walter Penley's son, with the company's truck, loaded a car of ash bolts upon the train at East Sumner last week.

Friday morning the thermometer registered 32 at five o'clock, which reminds us of what is coming.

While we were trading with our regular Rawleigh salesman, J. Berton Emery of Peru, recently, we learned that while Mr. Emery was attending the annual Rawleigh convention at Providence, R. I., recently, where there were assembled one hundred salesmen, Mr. Emery headed the list of all the New England States on sales for the year, allowing him the honor of bringing the cup away down here among the mountains of old Maine.

HISTORY OF THE EARLY DAYS IN THE TOWN OF OXFORD, IN OXFORD COUNTY, MAINE

STORIES OF THE BUILDING UP OF THE TOWN AND ITS INDUSTRIES

Written by Charles E. Waterman of Mechanic Falls

The [illegible] Oxford will celebrate the [illegible] of its incorporation on Saturday, August 24.

The territory embraced in the present towns of Oxford and Hebron was granted to Samuel Shepard, Jr., a civil engineer of Watertown, Mass., March 7, 1777, for services rendered in the survey of what is now the State of Maine, then the District of Maine, and a part of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. The grant was executed and accepted by the state and the grant confirmed June 24, 1779. In honor of its grantee this grant became known as Shepard's Gift.

Mr. Shepard began the settlement of his grant on the eastern side, in what is now the town of Hebron. The first settler was John Greenwood, a stepson of Mr. Shepard. His clearing was made where is now known as Greenwood Mountain, the site of the Western Maine Sanitorium. The date, probably in 1779, although there is little doubt as to the year. Mr. Shepard was never a resident of Oxford, but his wife, after her husband's death in 1788, came to Shepard's Gift to live with her son, John Greenwood, who had settled there. Her body now rests in the cemetery near the sanitorium.

The venture was not a good business proposition for Mr. Shepard and his son-in-law, Samuel Trent, and his son-in-law, Samuel Trent, was appointed administrator of the estate, among the assets recorded that of 13,860 acres to General Andrew Craigie, of Cambridge, Mass., on the western side of the grant, in what is now the town of Oxford. This sale was made in 1793, and the price paid was $1,000.

In the early days of Shepardsfield, as it was, perhaps, its leading requisite number of men settled in the plantation, and called at the home of Mr. Trent, December 28, 1791, to consider the organization of the plantation. A committee was appointed to draw a petition and this petition was presented at an adjourned meeting held in January 11, 1792. The petition was granted by the General Court of Massachusetts, March 6, 1792. In this petition it was requested that the town be Columbia; but Oxford was inserted instead. Thus the name of Hebron for thirty-seven years, the latter town having been incorporated February 27, 1829.

Two important things took place during the period when Oxford and Hebron existed and in which the Shepard grant, and is, therefore, interested, namely, the establishment of a church and the establishment of a Baptist church. In those days a church was a very important and necessary institution. The Baptist church, still standing, the church edifice standing on the Hebron Academy campus. The church was established May 24, 1795, was largely the result of the labors of Rev. Paul Coffin, a noted preacher of that time.

Another important event was the establishment of Hebron Academy, one of the first institutions of academic grade in this section of the state. It was founded in 1805. The founder gave 150 acres of land for the endowment and his agent, Nathaniel Whitney, was on the first board of trustees, and his son, George P. Whitney, succeeded him and continued on the board until his death.

Another important event of importance was the war of 1812. Hebron sent two companies to the defense of Portland, one company under the command of Captain Isaac Bonney, which was composed of men from that part of the town, within about the present confines of what is now Hebron, and the other from the western half of the town, under the command of Captain Samuel Robinson, within the territory of what is now Oxford.

Andrew Craigie, proprietor of what is now Oxford, was a noted man of Cambridge, and his name is yet perpetuated in that city by a street bearing it. He was born in Boston, June 6, 1744. He was a druggist, or, as that calling was known in the day, an apothecary. He also practiced medicine to a limited extent. He was the chief medical officer of the army, with rank of Apothecary General, on the staff of General George Washington. In 1791, he purchased the old Vassall house in Cambridge, which was not only noted for it's colonial architecture, but because it had been the headquarters of Washington during the investment of Boston, and later the home of the poet Longfellow.

Here the Craigies entertained royally all of the leading people of the day, who visited Boston, including Talleyrand and the Duke of York, father of Queen Victoria. He purchased considerable land in Cambridge, and in connection with other men, built the Craigie bridge between Boston and East Cambridge. He also gave the site for the Harvard College botanical garden of which institution he was a trustee.

Oxford, from its position, it's possession of forest clad hills and rich river bottoms, might naturally be classed as an agricultural town, and William Whitney, Craigie's agent, must have considered it so, for he made an effort to settle the series of hills now known as East Oxford. He succeeded as the many old colonial mansions in that section now attest. The first highway in that part of Hebron, which is now Oxford, was laid out and the lots abbutting settled in the closing years of the eighteenth century. Another highway had been located as early as 1774, running over Number Four Hill, through Hebron, where the academy now stands, over Greenwood Mountain into Bakerstown, as Minot was then called, but it is interesting to Oxford only as that town was then a part of Hebron. So far as Oxford is concerned the road through East Oxford was the first laid out thoroughfare in the town. From South Paris it ran over Whitney and Robinson hills and down to the Little Androscoggin River at the farm now owned by Fred S. Waterman and over Pigeon Hill into that part of Bakerstown now known as Poland.

Building a bridge over a river the size of the Little Androscoggin was a considerable undertaking in those days and the first one was a float bridge of logs used in the summer, but swung down along the bank in winter, when crossings were made on the ice. A large rock on Mr. Waterman's farm where this old bridge was chained can yet be seen. A bridge was subsequently built in two spans, using an island, situated at that point to break the span. A big jam of logs and other flotsam was at the head of this island and it was known as Jam Island, and the bridge as Jam Island Bridge. It was soon carried away by a freshet and a single span bridge was built farther up the stream, but this also was carried away by a freshet, and when the road from Welchville to Mechanic Falls was built in 1841, that part of the old county road from the Waterman farm to Pigeon Hill was abandoned. On this old road was erected the first hotel or "tavern" as it was then called, in town on Robinson Hill, now the residence of Samuel Dudley.

Another road running from Norway over Allen Hill and along the shore of Lake Thompson was laid out shortly afterwards, and on this road on Allen Hill, was reserved a lot of land for the proprietor, still known as the "Craigie Farm". General Craigie was never a permanent resident of Oxford, but made his home here when stopping on his purchase. It is a very sightly place, with a view up and down the valley of the Little Androscoggin River and along the course of Lake Thompson. It was probably this view that caused him to dream of building a city around the outlet of the lake.

Although location would indicate Oxford as an agricultural town, manufacturing has been the chief industry. General Craigie thought the town particularly adapted for raising wheat and rearing sheep and he did his best by precept, an example to induce his settlers to do both, and, as an inducement, dammed the outlet and built buildings in which to grind the first product into flour and convert the second into cloth. The latter industry has survived to the present day.

This water privilege was not the first one to be developed in town. That was at the foot of that Little Lakelet forming a part of the eastern boundary of the town, known as Marshall or Matthews Pond. In 1781, the land about the outlet of this pond was bought by David Marshall, who shortly afterwards dammed the outlet and built mills for sawing lumber and grinding grain. The privilege is used to the present day.

David Marshall has the distinction of being the only person in Oxford or Hebron to come in conflict with the aborigines. His first settlement was in Bethel. He was living there at the time of the Indian raid in 1781, and in consequence fled to New Gloucester. He did not return to Bethel, but settled in Hebron instead.

The woolen business, which has been the chief industry of Oxford and which was begun by General Craigie, had its ups and downs before it became the present enterprising corporation. In 1836, the first building for the manufacture of cloth was burned and in 1839 a brick building was erected to take its place. This was occupied by Gillett & Bridges. In a few years this firm was succeeded by Stevens & Shurburn and later by Jones & Durell. An incorporated company known as the Oxford Woolen Company run it for a few years, when it was sold to John Hall. After running it a few years in his own name, he interested Joseph Robinson in the business. Later Robinson bought out Hall's interest, and formed a corporation—The Robinson Manufacturing Company, which company has conducted the business to the present time. This mill has been in the Robinson family for nearly 80 years, the business passing from Joseph Robinson into the hands of his sons, John B. and Albert Robinson, and is now being conducted by his grandchildren, Joseph Robinson and Mrs. Leotine Stiles.

In 1829 Calvin Woodward built the second dam on the outlet of Lake Thompson. About 1840 the cotton industry received a great impetus which resulted in the building of mills in the manufacturing cities of Massachusetts and the Maine cities of Biddeford, Saco and Lewiston. The craze reached Oxford and a corporation known as the Hayesville Cotton Manufacturing Company, with Dennis Hayes the leading spirit, was formed to build and operate a cotton mill on the lower dam. The building was built and the business run for about four years. Great expectations were anticipated about this business. It was about the time of the gold craze in California, and because Oxford people thought they had a gold mine about this lower dam, the place was nicknamed "California", a name which still sticks to the locality. This cotton mill went up in smoke in 1850.

Since that day the lower privilege has been used for a number of manufacturing purposes. Wooden wares of various kinds have been manufactured there at various times by Walter H. Thompson, Israel Dunn, Solon Rawson, James H. Chapman and B. F. Sturtevant. The first named man manufactured shoe pegs. At that day about all shoe bottoms were fastened on with these pegs. In due course of time the privilege fell into the hands of Edwin F. Richmond, who used it for grinding grain. He sold it to the Robinson Manufacturing Company, which uses it for auxiliary power to their mill by turning the power into electricity.

In 1820, the road leading along the eastern bank of the Little Androscoggin was built, and at the same time that stream was dammed at the point where Welchville now it. This dam was built by Benajah Pratt, George W. Robinson, Nathan, Ezra and Samuel Wright, all young men residing in East Oxford. In 1832 this property, with what land was left of the Craigie estate (some 6,000 acres) was purchased by Jacob D. Brown and a lumbering business begun. In 1836 John Welch of Boston bought Brown's property. He increased the lumbering business and a little village grew up about his mill, which took his name. After his death in 1850, the mill and property was sold to George W. King of Portland, who run the business for about twenty years. The business was not very successful and the water privilege was sold to A. C. Denison of Mechanic Falls. Shortly after the Civil War, John Harper erected a woolen mill on the eastern side of the river, which run until the mill was burned down in 1891. Emery Andrews run a mill for the manufacturers of leather board on the western side during this time, but having trouble over tax exemption, moved his business away. The water power in the river and Lakes Hogan and Whitney, is now used as a storage basin for the Waterfalls Paper Company at Mechanic Falls.

Oxford has had a unique chapter in transportation. Of course the lumber and other products manufactured in Oxford had to be transported to the seaboard and in early days this was done by ox and horse flesh—a slow process, and other methods were desired. One of the first bills passed at the first session of the first Maine Legislature was one incorporating the Cumberland and Oxford Canal, which sought to provide water transportation for the interior towns of Cumberland and Oxford Counties to Portland. This canal was constructed and opened as far as Harrison, but the branch through Pleasant and Thompson Lakes was never built, because of the building of the Atlantic & St. Lawrence Railroad, afterwards the Grand Trunk and now the Canadian National. This road reached Oxford in 1850. There is yet a man living in Welchville—David Staples—who in youth engaged in ox-transportation to Portland.

The Congress Street Corporation
2,000 SHARES
7 Per Cent. Cumulative Preferred Stock
Par Value $100
Callable at 105 Semi-Annual Dividends
PROPERTY: The Congress Street Corporation was organized under the Maine laws, and owns one of the most valuable plots of land in the City of Portland, at the corner of Congress and High Streets. This land has a 211.65 foot frontage on Congress Street and a 193.35 foot frontage on High Street, a total area of approximately 29,000 square feet. A modern, fireproof, six story building has been constructed upon this plot that contains space for 20 stores on the ground floor; 30 shops on the second floor; and 147 offices on the third, fourth, fifth and sixth floors. Upon the rear portion of this lot there is the finest and most up-to-date theater in the State of Maine, having a capacity of approximately 2,500, and equally adaptable for motion picures or high class musical presentations.
This building is now practically completed, and is occupied by many tenants. A surety bond with the Detroit Fidelity and Surety Company as surety, guaranteeing final completion free from all liens, has been executed and deposited with the Fidelity Trust Company, trustee under the first mortgage bond indenture. Adequate fire and other insurance, in reliable companies, will be carried at all times.
EARNINGS: Based upon signed present leases and applications received, it is estimated, after allowing for operating expenses, including taxes, insurance, vacancies, and all other expenses connected with the operation of the building, that the net income available for payment of interest on bond issues and dividends on preferred stock will be $133,600.00. This shows almost five times the amount necessary to pay dividends upon this preferred stock issue. History of Oxford

To build the above mentioned canal various devices were resorted to, among them a lottery, and a capitol prize of $5,000 was won by Cyrus Shaw, store keeper, inn keeper and postmaster of Oxford. To salve his conscience he took a part of this sum to build a church in Oxford village—the first church to be built within what is now the territory of Oxford. It was built in 1826, and was of the Baptist variety. It had a checkered career and was burned down in 1845 and the members joined the Congregational church, which had been organized the same year as the Baptist.

The oldest religious denomination in Oxford is the Methodist, although they were the last to erect a church edifice (1861). They formed a class in the house of John Caldwell, East Oxford, in 1793, and another class was formed on Pigeon Hill in 1805. The Methodist and Congregational churches are now federated.

In 1812 or 1843, the town was visited by Rev. William Miller, founder of the Christian Advent Church. He gained converts who have been interested ever since, although a church of that denomination was not built until a couple of decades ago.

A Catholic church has been added to the number within the first decade.

Before leaving the church organizations of the town, perhaps it might be well to state that in the burning of he Baptist church an organ was destroyed which was the sole work of a native musician and mechanic, Captain Luther Carman. That was the age when church singing was generally led by a bass viol.

There is another building in town, which has a connection with church history, and that is the town house, situated in Welchville. It was given by the Craigie heirs, (he died September 19, 1819) by his direction, not only to serve as a town house, but for church purposes. Any denomination to have access to it by application. It was built in 1829. They also gave land in the rear of the building for a burying ground, which is called the Craigie Cemetery, and by the irony of fate is the only thing called by his name in this town he founded, except the Pythian Lodge. Oxford village was first called Craigie's Mills, but when the post office came (it was first established in East Oxford) it took the name of the town, Oxford.

The professional life of a Maine town of the last century always began with a minister, but the second professional man of such a community was a physician. The first doctor came to Hebron in 1802—Dr. Jacob Tewkesbury. He settled on the top of the highest hill in what is now East Oxford, and for 15 years traveled the bridle paths of Hebron and Oxford on horseback with saddlebags. He was more than a physician to the community. He represented the town in the legislation, was master of the first Lodge of Masons established in Oxford County (Oxford Lodge instituted on Paris Hill in 1807) trustee of Hebron Academy and was the first postmaster of the town. He had an interesting family, two sons, Jacob, Jr. and Samuel, who followed the profession of the father and another son, George, who became a Congregational minister. Dr. Robert Carr settled in 1812 near Hebron Academy and it may be said without fear of contradiction that these two men had more children named after them than any other two men who ever lived in town. Dr. Artemas L. Hersey succeeded Dr. Tewkesbury. He was a prominent man in town, interested in music, literature and education. Dr. Samuel E. Verrill practiced in town and was drowned in Lake Thompson with three other men in 1871, by the capsizing of a sail boat. Other physicians who have practiced in town have been A. E. Horr, Orin Stevens, W. B. Haskell, Eugene B. Holden, H. E. Doughty and Harry R. Farris. Dr. Farris was a medical officer in the World War with rank of Lieutenant Colonel. After the war he established a sanitorium on Allen Hill, where he himself died in 1922.

In speaking of wars, Oxford furnished 177 men to the Civil War and spent $17,415.52 for dependent families. She sent a few men to the Spanish American War in the Norway Light Infantry of which Wilfred E. Perkins of the town, was a lieutenant. She sent her quota to the World War. The veterans of the first war instituted a Grand Army Post in Oxford (A. Roberts Post) and those of the last, an American Legion Post. A nurse comes pretty near to being in the medical profession. And Oxford had a prominent one in the World War, Mrs. Pauline Jordan Rankin. In the early days of the war she worked in France, but was transferred to Bulgaria. To get to this post she went by the way of the Baltic Sea and through Russia, suffering many hardships. She is now engaged in "Near East Relief Work" in Armenia.

Of the legal profession Oxford has had several prominent practioners. Junius Shaw Keith was the first settled lawyer of the town coming to Craigie's Mills in 1823, where he died in 1846. He was a man of culture and built a fine residence on a hill overlooking Lake Thompson, still standing. He entered politics, represented this town in the legislature, was state senator and postmaster of the town 14 years. General John J. Perry was, perhaps, the most noted lawyer of the town. He was a militia general, went to the legislature and to Congress, and was editor of the Oxford Democrat for many years the organ of Oxford County government. Oxford has furnished three other editors of this paper—at least they lived in town for a part of their lives—William D. Pidgin, Dr. Thomas Brown and Charles E. Waterman. George Hazen is the present lawyer and has practiced in town many years. The late Judge Herrick C. Davis had his shingle out here for a little while and Freeman B. Andrews practiced law during his lifetime.

Oxford has furnished lawyers for other towns and states. George F. Holmes of Portland, Frank E. Hawkes of Boston, who died this present summer, Charles F. Hall of Boston, George Walker of New York and Leon Walker of Portland are still before the bar. Another man is classed with lawyers, but more generally known for other things—Joseph R. Parrott—the builder of The East Coast Florida Railroad, 29 miles of which is over a viaduct from the point of Florida to Key West. Mr. Parrott died at his summer home on Megquier Island, Lake Thompson on October 13, 1913, at the age of 55 years.

Samuel Parris was not a lawyer professionally, but he was an associate justice in the first Court of Common Pleas set up in Oxford County in 1805. He was an early settler of Hebron, a trustee of Hebron Academy and a representative to the legislature. He died in Washington, D. C., in 1847, aged 93 years. His son, Albion K. Parris, was born in Hebron, June 19, 1788. He graduated from Dartmouth College and the first man to be admitted to the bar from the combined towns of Hebron and Oxford (1809). He was a member of both branches of the legislature and of Congress and second governor of Maine. He died in Portland in 1857.

Mention of journalism has been made a few paragraphs back, but the star journalist of Oxford is yet to be mentioned—Major Edward Augustine Perry, son of General John J. Perry. He began his journalistic career on the Lewiston Journal, continued it on the Bangor Whig and finally drifted to the Boston Herald. He was that paper's representative in the Franco-German War and was presented the iron cross by Emperor William for bravery in rescuing wounded on the field of battle. After the war he went to England for his paper, when he gained note—by unearthing the intimacy between Charles Stewart Parnell and Kitty O'Shea, which caused the downfall of that Irish statesman.

Among the old families of the town, perhaps none bear a more honored name than that of Holmes. The name of E. Rawson Holmes can be found on many public documents relating to Oxford, but a brother, Freeland S. Holmes, will forever embalm the family name in Oxford by his gift of a public library. This library has been benefiting the town for more than half a century and is still, perhaps, the best institution of the town. It is presided over by Mrs. Kate Starbird, who has largely aided in connection with the Hersey Guild, to erect the present library building. Not only is the library well stocked with books, but she has been active in preserving the history of the town in a series of scrap books, preserving everything of note. All the residents, who have aspired to literary note have their works preserved here—Miss Heloise H. Hersey, the teacher and lecturer, in her works on Browning and Shakespeare; Charles P. Durell with his four juvenile books; Marquis F. King in his Annals of Oxford; Charles E. Waterman in his historical studies and essays; and Mrs. Alma Pendexter Hayden, poems. She was one of the first teachers in the high school which was established in 1875 with Dr. John D. Holt, principal.

The high lights of Oxford history have here been presented in a very condensed form. Full justice to them would be given many whole issues of the Advertiser. Such a presentation is unsatisfactory, because it is impossible to give an account of several thousand men and women, who have contributed their "bit" to the life and uplift of Old Oxford, but it is to be hoped that someone at sometime will write an extended history of the town and its people when ample justice will be done all. —Charles E. Waterman.

This . . . answers the question . . . which is

America's finest medium-priced automobile

The Oakland All-American Six was compared with twenty other cars in 873 individual comparisons. Of the 873 points of comparison, Oakland established clear-cut superiority on 451 or 51.37 per cent. The twenty cars combined proved at best to be equal to Oakland on 382 points or 43.50 per cent. Yet thirteen of these cars are higher-priced than the All-American Six . . . Let us give you complete returns of this analysis. Then you will know that here is America's finest medium-priced automobile.

What these features mean to you		How Oakland compares with the field
Large piston displacement is needed to develop high power at moderate engine speed. Moderate engine speed is an important factor in the life of a car.	PISTON DISPLACEMENT	Oakland's 228 cubic inch piston displacement is greater than 12 of the 20 cars in its price field. Of the 8 remaining cars, 7 are higher priced than Oakland.
Fisher bodies are famous for style, luxury and roominess. In addition, they hold such advantages as sturdy hardwood and steel construction, VV windshield, side cowl ventilation and adjustable drivers' seats.	FISHER BODY	Only Oakland and two other cars in the field offer bodies by Fisher. And one of the two is nearly $100 higher in price than Oakland. Of the 18 cars which have less-known bodies, 11 are priced above the All-American Six.

Prices, $1145 to $1375, f. o. b. Pontiac, Mich., plus delivery charges. Spring covers and Lovejoy shock absorbers included in list prices. Bumpers and rear fender guards extra. General Motors Time Payment Plan available at minimum rate.

$1145 AND UP

Consider the delivered price as well as the list price when comparing automobile values . . . Oakland-Pontiac delivered prices include only reasonable charges for handling and for financing when the G. M. A. C. Time Payment Plan is used.

Maine consumers pay for waste power

All Maine Power Companies have surplus power available at times, which is for sale at very low rates. But there is market for only a small part of this surplus power in Maine, and the remainder runs to waste.

It is utterly impossible to find a market in Maine for surplus water power which exists between Saturday night and Monday morning—when most of the industries of Maine are shut down—and at many other periods.

There is a market for some of this wasted power in nearby states, where it could be used by steam power companies as a substitute for coal.

Under the existing law, this surplus power is paid for by Maine consumers who can't use it, and is wasted.

Under the Surplus Power Export Law, the exported surplus would be paid for by power companies in other states, and put to work.

To that extent, Maine Power Companies and their customers would be relieved of the burden of surplus power.

Every electric consumer in Maine should, in his own interest, help rid Maine of the burden of wasted power.

A dozen girls from the Harbor and North Fryeburg spent a couple of days in camp with Mrs. Arlene Benson and Mrs. Walter Parr, Wednesday and Thursday. They were: Esther Charles, Lucia Guptill, Alteen Bemis, Nina McKeen, Julia Sampson, Effie and Doris Forest. Esther and Hannah Hutchins, Marian Flint, Leona Libby and Pearl Bemis. As a finish to the girls' camp, the young folk of the Harbor beseiged the lake shore Thursday evening for a clam bake and hot dog feast. Thirty or forty young folk had a big time, winding up with a big camp fire and the usual stories, jokes and songs.

Friday of this week the committee in charge of the cemetery at Fryeburg Harbor are serving supper and giving an entertainment at the Harbor to secure funds for the care of the cemetery grounds.

Next Sunday, the Rev. J. J. Eisen, Rabbi of the Indian Acres Boys' Camp, will be the special preacher at the services in the parish. Rabbi Eisen will preach at North Fryeburg at 9:30 a. m., and at Lovell at 11.00 a. m. The congregations of the other appointments are asked to unite in these services and not miss the opportunity of hearing the rabbi.

Several wholesale firms gave various kinds of food, baked beans, bread, butter, meats, coffee, etc., which helped to make the serving different, but not better than the famous cooks of North Lovell provide. AID TO POULTRY RAISERS

Since half the poultry flocks in Maine are believed to carry infection of Pullorum disease, a new bulletin covering seventeen questions and answers is now ready for distribution, according to Dr. Leon S. Merrill, director of agricultural extension, University of Maine. Dr. F. L. Richardson, extension poultry specialist, are joint authors of the new publication.

During the last year approximately 60,000 birds were tested for flock owners throughout the state and, it is stated that at least 100 flocks are free of this disease. Demand for the disease free stock from these flocks exceeded the supply. Accredited flock owners had orders for over 100,000 chicks and hatching eggs that they could not fill. Pullorum disease was formerly known as Bacillary White Diarrhea. The bulletin, it is said, will be sent to those who address the college of agriculture at Orono or at the county agent's office in any county.

By the way, what has become of the railroad man, who wore a watch chain as big as a log cabin?

Meeting of Kiwanis Club—Made Trip Up Mt. Washington—Mrs. Chellis Visited in Vermont—Merrifield-Clark Wedding.

The Kiwanis Club met Monday evening, August 12th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Norton. Seventy-eight were present and there was room in the house and hearts for more. Three ladies from the Library Association, Mrs. S. B. Stanley, Mrs. Harry B. Pratt and Mrs. Arthur Gilman served an appetizing dinner, consisting of meat pie, tomatoes, cucumbers, salads, doughnuts, pie and coffee, besides various other good things. Speaking in the vernacular, the ladies of the committee "surely did themselves proud."

All Kianians are musical. A burst of melody from Kianian throats carries all before it, and the Kianian quartette supplemented with duets and solos by the ladies present added the finishing touch to the general harmony.

Taking advantage of a sunshiny day the first of the week, W. A. Garner and his two sons, Allen F. and John W. sealed—by automobile—Mt. Washintgon. They were glad when they were "over the top" and thankful when they reached the foot, for it is a somewhat hazardous trip. Others were taking the climb and some would go part way, thinking it better to be safe than sorry, but "all's well that ends well."

Mrs. W. M. Chellis recently motored to Morrisville, Vermont, where Mr. Chellis is employed and was very cordially received. They spent a week there taking many auto rides between whiles through lovely scenery and over good roads. Once they found themselves in Middlebury and another time on the edge of New York. No untoward marred the pleasure of their trips and they returned home well pleased with themselves and the world at large.

Rev. Arthur Callaghan occupied his usual place last Sunday morning and his people were glad to welcome his return.

On Wednesday, the fourteenth of August, in Rockland, Me., a pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George B. Clark, when their daughter, Ruth Mary, became the bride of Elton Davis Merrifield of Kezar Falls. The Merrifields were all present as were the Rockland friends. The bride was a vision of beauty in white chiffon and picture hat and the groom? He was all right. They made a fine looking couple and all were proud of them. Harry Merrifield, the groom's uncle, was best man, and the bride's sister was bridesmaid. Walter S. Rounds was the officiating minister. After the ceremony came the reception and then—all too quickly—the hour of departure, when with smiles and tears the bridal party set forth on their honeymoon, taking a trail leading to Kinco.

BE SURE TO POUND TIN CANS FLAT

Dogs and cats have been seriously hurt by forcing their heads into empty tin cans that have contained fish, meat, or soup. Sometimes they are not able to free themselves. Their terror is pitiable, and if not found, they may run into some hiding place and die a miserable death. It would be easy to see that a can, when emptied, is pounded out of shape so that no animal can get its head into it. To do this may save great suffering.

REDUCED POTATO ACREAGE

Certified seed potato acreage for 1929 is 30 per cent less than in 1928, according to the United States Department of Agriculture New England Crop Reporting Service. The outlook in Maine is good for yields, but there is a decrease in Cobblers and Spaulding Rose potatoes.

Reports from inspection officials in the states and provinces shown below indicate that 44,785 acres of potatoes were entered for certification this year compared with 63,367 acres entered last year and 48,299 acres in 1927. All of the states and provinces have shared this decline in the acreage of potatoes being grown, particularly for seed purposes. The acreage in Maine was reduced 34 per cent; New Hampshire 59 per cent; Vermont, 16 per cent; New York, 1 per cent; New Brunswick, 23 per cent; Nova Scotia, 18 per cent, and Prince Edward Island, 30 per cent.

The variety totals for all of the sections represented show that the acreage of Cobblers has been reduced 38 per cent from last year; Green Mountains, 20 per cent, and Spaulding Rose 41 per cent. The acreage of Smooth Rurals was increased 51 per cent and Bussets 6 per cent. These varieties are important only in New York State. To date weather conditions have been reasonably favorable to a good yield of certified seed potatoes in most of the states and provinces.

"THE PIRATES' DEN"

By Kathleen Smith

A group of faces greets you at the door,
Eager, expectant, marked with mocking mirth
A tenseness and a lurking mystery is wrapt
O'er these feast-fiends, these children of the earth.
You hesitate, and then with valor new,
You summon faith in human brotherhood,
Can those who sing and frolic thru the night
Be sinister, or do you aught but good?
The lonely den, dim-lit in greenish glow,
Is decked with skulls and cross-bones, and the face
Of some great leader, grim, grotesque,
Hangs on the wall, the Pirates' Royal Mace,
A barb'rous clash! A raucous shout! and lo—
The merry-making's made, and mystery's fled
Figured and fathomable, as youths of old,
Young nineteen-twenty-nine goes home to bed.

Kite flying on the meadow beyond Norway station is something more than a pastime for many boys. Ingenious combinations are made to fly and the young inventors are developing a talent which may be useful in the future, when planes hide the sun and hog air lines.

Capt. Mel. Sampson, who here formed about affairs around Lake Pennesseewassee, says more bass and togue were caught during the first week in August than ever before. A number over four pound bass were taken. The explains the stroke of luck he had in practically a week of dull weather.

John P. Toomey, news editor of the Lewiston Sun-Journal, has been in Norway, looking over the town and shaking. He is enjoying a vacation of two with his wife and baby at the home of Mrs. James Martin in South Paris. John introduced himself to the editor a few years ago, when in town as a reporter covering the semi-pro ball games for his paper, but now finds little time for the exchange of greetings.

H. J. Hamlin, Spokane, Washington, sends this message with his renewal: "Although I am 77 years of age, I keep active, having a small farm, and continue a small deal in cattle, hogs, and always keep a good horse; although I have an automobile. Any old Maine horseman can't be happy along without a team to drive. We still have a fair wheat crop. Some farmers here operate from 1,000 to 2,000 acres, doing most of the work with tractors and machinery."

We received a letter from William H. Gale of Lynn, Mass., Tuesday, renewing his subscription to the Advertiser. He makes apologies for his writing by saying, "Excuse my writing, I am in my 91st. year." The writing is o. k. Many years younger, could not begin to write as well. Mr. Gale was buyer for B. F. Spinney & Co. for many years and spent much time at the Norway factory. He has many acquaintances in Norway who had pleasant associations with him during those years.

Mellie Dunham, the famous fiddler, was passed around the office Friday by Judge Charles F. Whitman. As a matter of fact, Mellie was on a miniature tintype and appeared as a youth of 12 years. The picture was snapped about 65 years ago, when "Little Mellie" was struggling to absorb the rudiments of book learning in a district school, under Judge Whitman, the master of ceremonies and teacher.

H. R. Denison of Harrison sends us the following: "Caney, Kan., has set a pace for Kansas towns in courtesy toward the local whittlers. To save the benches in the park from the ravages of these curb stone philosophers, the city has laid in a supply of whittling sticks. Each park bench bears this placard: 'If you must whittle, call at the City Hall and register and suitable whittling sticks will be provided.'" What an opportunity for a Weary Club with a whittling department!

Miss Esther Hamburger of Pinecliffe Camp, Harrison, was in Wednesday. For the past few years the girls of the camp have issued a camp magazine, entitled "Sparks", but this year the girls decided that they would not get out the usual magazine, but may another year. There are sixty-nine girls in camp and with the counsellors and help make a company of about 100 in camp and they have had a most successful season. Miss Hamburger said she wanted us to know that the magazines we had printed in the past were very satisfactory and that when they were resumed we should hear from them.

O. W. Brown, city editor of the Lynn Telegram-News, informs us he reached home safely after a hectic week in Norway and back on the job. He sent a news item from a Massachusetts paper telling about Hugh and Mrs. Pendexter and son, Pannee, of Norway, who were stopping in Swampscott. In this item the compositor slipped, when the type was made to say that Mr. Pendexter is a writer of historical "friction." The "friction" may be well said for he handles many of his historical characters without fear or favor. As a matter of slang, he uses no lubricant, as soft-soap, banana oil or applesauce in presenting facts in his stories.

AT THE PIRATES' DEN

To the many who missed seeing Jean La Rae when he appeared at the "Den" early in the season, the management dedicated last Saturday night when they played a return engagement of this artist. For weeks the cry at the "Den" has been, "when are you going to play Jean again?" and the management finally responded to the popular demand and arranged for the return engagement of this popular local boy. As usual Jean captivated his audience with his singing and dancing and for this return engagement brought with him new and gorgeous creations which proved fascinating. He is truly an artist and having spent much of his childhood here, Norway can well be proud of her native son.

On Monday night "Capt. Mac" and his Pirates play to a capacity crowd at Hartford's Pavilion, Cornish. These boys are proving very popular through this section where they have played for many dances and only a scarcity of dates, when they are not regularly playing at the "Den," prevents them from filling the ever increasing demand for their services among dance lovers.

This coming Monday, August 26th., "Capt. Mac" and his Pirates are to play at Shelburn Inn Pavilion, where they are one of only four bands to play this famous pavilion this season. H. C. Taylor, the owner of this place has finally reconsidered his decision not to open this year and in response to signed petitions, delegations from civic clubs and countless friends he has arranged for a series of four dances playing only recognized bands. Shelburn Inn Pavilion opened last week with the celebrated Roane's Pennsylvanians and Thursday of this week they played Jacques Renard and his Cocoanut Grove dance orchestra from Boston. Next week the boys from the "Den" do their "stuff" followed Labor Day week by Paul Spee and his Victor recording band from Boston. These bands are all famous to the lovers of dancing and Norway people should feel pleased to know that the boys from their local rendevous are to be one of the four chosen bands playing Shelburn this season.

On Tuesday night a party made up of members of the Van Arnam's Minstrel's were guests of the "Den" and several of this party proved most entertaining with their songs rendered at the request of friends in the audience. Due to the late hour that their show was over it was necessarily late when they arrived at the "Den" but the many who remained for the hour of extended dancing were well repaid and to judge from the applause, enjoyed the novelty of meeting "show people" and seeing their presentations informally. This is only one of the novel features being regularly presented at the "Den."

For this Saturday night the Pirates' Den has a most unusual attraction to offer in The Worths, celebrated society dancers. The Worths are brother and sister, Norman and Clarice, popular members of the Boston social set, and who, a few years ago, upon the death of their father, were forced to earn their own living. Both being wonderful dancers, they naturally took to society dancing, which was all the rage at the time and soon became unusually successful and are today America's foremost dance team. They are now ranked with the leading dance teams of the world and have played at the Club Lido in New York, a season at the famous resort hotel, The Winton, in Jacksonville, Florida, a season on the west coast at Long Beach, California, and have recently returned after spending snowy months in the sunny climate of Bermuda, where they entertained at the exclusive Bermudiana Hotel.

It would be impossible for the management of the "Den" to pay their salary under the usual circumstances, but due to the fact that they are in this section playing a society engagement at Whitefield, New Hampshire, on Friday night, coupled with the fact that they are old friends of Jean LaRae and are making oeigle them to dance for you while here.

Sermon on Cows

Delivered by John Woodman and Set Down by K. C. Gurney at the Wearies Sometime Since

"There is no other thing on the farm that attracts me so much as do the cows. Gentle and kind creatures they are, when enjoying their own company, with horns on one end and heels on the other, to take care of any strange thing that tresspasses on them. No one can tell to a certainty when a cow is going to kick. With her heels hung to her body in such a manner that you cannot avoid being struck if she decides to use them while you are milking her.

"The side kick of a cow always puts me in mind of a man that is cutting weeds with a scythe. The reach is at least four feet and the hoof part describes a circle whose reach is anyway 12 feet.

"The cow has been the most potent of all influences in the building of this, the mightiest nation in history. Her sons drew the plow which first cultivated the land of the new world, hauled to market the products of the field, and, with slow energy, moved the chattels and household goods beyond the mountains to new homes in the farther west.

"They supplied the beef which is the food of the Anglo-Saxon, a race that was never conquered since history began. They furnished the shoes of the pioneers, who trod the unknown wilds and made of them the farmsteads and cities of our present enlightenment.

They gave the clothes and robes to protect the pioneers against the destroying blasts of winter and made commerce possible before the railroad was. They covered the chair upon which he sat, filled the mattress upon which he slept and glued the furniture he used. The old cow is the mother of the whole bovine race and foster mother of half of the human race.

"From the roadside weed she manufactures the most nourishing of human foods. She is the ready aid of the farmer, the pet of the rich man and the ever present help of the poor. She is the economist of the people and the conservator of their resources. She partakes of the grass of the field and leaves the farm the richer for her presence.

"As she helped to develop the farm from the wilderness and as she ate of its first fruits so she will renew the life of the soil and make a still greater agriculture possible. In all our history the cow has been man's closest friend and benefactor.

"Upon her products are built the great business interests which center in the stock yards, the creameries, the shoe factories, the harness shops and the mills.

Take away the cow and our banks would close, our graveyards yawn, and the wheels of commerce would cease to turn. Foster and care for her and business flourishes, the fertility of the soil is conserved and she becomes the custodian of the nation's prosperity.

Many years ago I went into partnership with a man and bought a cow. He was to keep it in his barn and go fifty-fifty with the milk and feed. He never gave me any of the milk claiming my half of the cow was the horn end and I must feed my end.

I went to law with him and it took a long time to settle the case. I pulled one way holding the horns and he pulled the other way wth the tail, and while the case was pending his lawyer got the milk.

"I won in the end as I had the smartest lawyer and got satisfaction. My lawyer got the cow."

Hugh Pendexter's Stories

Is Authority on Colonial, Indian History —Written 1,000 Short Stories and 68 Book-Length Novels

From the Portland Evening News

Hugh Pendexter, of Norway, is recognized as America's outstanding authority on colonial and Indian history and his stories dealing with events during the early days of the United States are now recommended by educators and by historians as some of the best contributions we have dealing with the events of this romantic period.

Mr. Pendexter has made a life study of the American Indian, covering the entire country. In this connection he has also delved deeply into the thousands of incidents which occurred when the Americans were conquering the United States from its original inhabitants.

He has now developed a plan upon which he is working and this is to cover United States history as a whole, in story form, but holding strictly to the truth of the incidents and events which occur in the novels.

In this connection it is interesting to note that he was the only American invited to participate in the search for La Salle's boat, "The Griphon," the first sailing vessel launched on the Great Lakes, in 1677, and lost after clearing the Straits of Detroit.

His novels on the various frontiers are used in connection with the teaching of history in many schools throughout the United States.

Hugh Pendexter is a Maine product, in every sense of the word. He was born in Pittsfield, January 15, 1875, and graduated from the Nicholl's Latin School in Lewiston. In 1897 he married Helen M. Faunce of Norway, the town in which he now lives and where all of his writing has been done.

He was a news writer on the Rochester, New York, Post-Express for 12 years and during seven of these years he wrote continuously for magazines.

He originated the Tiberius Smith stories which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post and many other magazines and were put out in book form by Harper Brothers. He originated the Bureau of Abnormal Litigation stories featured in many of the biggest magazines. In all he has sold 1,000 short stories.

Besides the Harper publications Mr. Pendexter has had 7 books from the press of Small-Maynard Company and two from Doubleday Page and Company. The latter were Red Belts and Gentlemen of the North.

Since 1920 Mr. Pendexter's publishers have been the Bobbs-Merrill Company. This house published Kings of the Missouri, of which S. S. McClure, the Veteran magazine editor, said, "If Roosevelt were alive he would call you to the White House and make you famous."

A Virginia Scout is used by the State of Virginia as a guide in making its historical pageants. Others of his better known books are, Pay Gravel, Old Misery, Wife-Ship Woman, Harry Idaho, Red Road, Bird of Freedom, and the Gate Through the Mountain.

William Collins and Sons, London, have published all of these novels and also have published two which have yet to appear in America. These are the Road to Eldorado and Wolf Law. Strange as it may seem, Mr. Pendexter's stories have a tremendous sale in the British Isles.

Wolf Law has also been presented in motion pictures.

In all Mr. Pendexter has had published 22 books. He has written 50 historical novels for serialization and eventually all will appear in book form.

At the age of 54 Mr. Pendexter has turned out, besides the short stories, many articles and hundreds of novelettes and 68 book-length novels, or nearly 1 1-2 of the latter for every year of his life. English publishers keep all his works in print in five different editions.

When one remembers his 12 years' work as news writer, with Criminal Courts for his beat, specializing in murder cases, and realizes the millions of words he wrote on that one line alone, one can believe his output has scarcely been rivaled.

He is a member of the various Masonic lodges of Norway, of Portland Commandery, Knights Templar, Kora Temple at Lewiston and is immediate past president of the Norway-South Paris Kiwanis Club. He is a member of the Authors' League of America and the Society of Authors, Playwrights and Composers of London.

Mr. Pendexter's older son, Hugh, Jr., is assistant editor of the Sunday Feature Section of the Philadelphia Public Ledger and his grandson is Hugh Pendexter, 3rd. His younger son, Faunce, in school at Norway, threatens to follow in his father's footsteps. Hugh, Jr. has written many articles of international interest which have been syndicated all over the world, or wherever newspapers are printed. For a pen name he uses an abbreviation of his own name and his wife's maiden name, "Dexter Haines."

Mrs. Hugh Pendexter is prominent in club work, having served two years as secretary of the Norway Womar's Club and as president of the Barton Reading Club for several years. She also has taken an active interest in political affairs. During the World War she was president of the Oxford County Red Cross Chapter from the beginning of America's participation in the war until the year following the Armistice.

Mr. Pendexter was asked what were some of the most dramatic moments of his life. He replied: "One was when I drew my first straight flush in a poker game in the grand jury room, where the reporters were gathered to await the return of a verdict in a sensational murder trial.

"A deputy sheriff appeared on the scene just as I completed the flush with the six of spades. The officer announced 'The Jury's coming in.'

"Cards were dropped, the flush was left unplayed and we bolted down several stories to the courtroom; and the judge didn't appear to receive the verdict for more than an hour.

"Another dramatic moment," said Mr. Pendexter, "was when I interviewed a little old lady in an unsolved murder case, handed her the dead girl's shoes and watched her go into a trance, and heard her describe the killing in a most realistic manner. There were no witnesses to the crime and it never has been solved. She painted word pictures of what she saw. She offered an entirely new line for investigation and furnished an entirely new theory of the murderer's escape. I always more than half believed the latter gave the real route of the murderer's flight."

Mr. Pendexter covered scores of celebrated murder trials as a news writer.

He has carved a niche for himself in the writer's Hall of Fame from which he can never be ousted.

The late Senator Beveridge pronounced his pioneer novel of Kansas to be the best of its kind to appear "in years and years."

One well known editor writes, "Have you considered what Hugh Pendexter's stories are going to be when he has finished working out his plan of covering United States History as a whole? Entirely aside from its fictional value, his gooks, as a whole, are going to be an exceedingly valuable and permanent contribution to the history of this Country. Among other things they should be made supplementary reading in every grammar, high school and college history course in the land. For they do what the school text books now fail to do, make the people and events of history alive and interesting."

The Rev. Harman Van Allen, writing editorially in the "Living Church" under the nom de plume of "Presbyter Ignotius," says: "I have spoken here before of the admirable historical novels written by Hugh Pendexter, some of which have appeared in book form. Thoroughly accurate as to facts, vivid as to coloring, convincing as to atmosphere, they are altogether the very best works of that kind published in America in this generation, and are doing for the formative period of the 18th century, in America, what Sir Walter Scott did for Scotland, in a somewhat corresponding age."

Mr. Pendexter's latest novel has just come off the press. It is called the Gate Through the Mountain and is a thrilling story of the Overland Mail of the Far West in 1867.

REFORESTING WASTE LANDS

"Even a forester should not carry all of his eggs in one basket," said Ralph M. Hutchinson, extension forestry specialist, University of Maine, in speaking of the advisability of a mixed planting of species under certain conditions.

"When reforesting old run out fields or abandoned farms in Maine, if white pine is to be used, it is advisable to plant a mixture with at least one-half of the trees of other conifers such as red (Norway) pine, European larch, or white spruce," he continued. "White pine in pure stands is subject to damage from a native insect known as "white pine weevil." This insect kills the leader or terminal growth and usually causes a forked tree.

"Since reforestation began to progress in Maine about 18 years ago, the tree planters have ordered from forest tree nurseries chiefly white pine and have planted this specie in pure stands. Many of these plantations of white pine have suffered seriously from the weevil damage and are producing crooked trees from which inferior lumber may be expected.

"Red pine is considered an excellent tree to plant in mixture with white pine on sandy loam or gravelly soils. It is not subject to damage from the white pine weevil. It generally grows faster than the white pine on the poorer soils. However, as red pine needs full light it is not adapted to planting on old fields where hardwoods have seeded in. On moist clay or clay loam soils white spruce makes good growth and this tree may be used in mixture with white pine on such sites. The white spruce may be cut for pulp wood before the white pine reaches maturity. European larch may be used with white pine and it grows very much faster. This tree may be cut for posts or poles many years before the white pine can be harvested at a profit.

ETIQUETTE FORGOTTEN

A reasoning being can usually find answers to his own questions, but there is one that stumps all. Why it it that motorists forget all etiquette and the rudiments of courtesy when they get behind a steering wheel?

It is not polite to swear at the dining table if the butter isn't passed the instant it is asked for. And almost everybody employs the polite "Pardon me" in pedestrian jams and crowded elevator. But get the same people in the driver's seat and there is loud honking and a cussword or two if the car ahead, stops too suddenly or fails to start soon enough.

Seldom does one meet a driver on the open highway who will given an inch to the other fellow and surrender his right-of-way to convenience other cars. It is everybody for himself and curses upon the other fellow even though his faults and transgressions are your own.

Motorists spurt around corners without regard for the safety and hearts of others; cars cross and halt suddenly in front of others without giving warning, and, instead of taking accidents calmly and assuming one's fair share of the blame, drivers and passengers strive to see which can out-yell and out-cuss the other. Why is politeness left behind or forgotten by most drivers the minute they step into their car? —Commercial.

EXCELLENT ADVICE

A wise man says: "The way to make progress is to get a mental picture of yourself as you would like to be. Keep this fixed in your mind." It is excellent advice. If young persons would set up high standards to which they would aim avoiding that which would distract them from the high place they would like to occupy in the world, the world would be far better than it is and growth in civilization would be much more rapid. Only a very few have low ideals, whatever they may attain to in the world. Set your standard high and then keep your eye on it.

Public Men I Have Known

Gen. Benj. F. Butler, Law and Politics
Sketch No. 20, Part II, by C. F. Whitman

Benj. F. Butler's career is naturally divided into three parts—his early life; law and politics, and his military exploits. The first having been treated of, this sketch is devoted to his life as a lawyer and politician.

For most readers, law and politics—and particularly the former—are very dry and uninteresting subjects, and are generally skipped. But there was nothing about Ben Butler's public life that was not interesting. He doubtless had his prosy periods, but they will form no part of this sketch.

I feel quite sure that all who have a sense of humor and delight in reading of cute things done, will read what I have written about him with much interest.

General Butler was very successful in his law practice in defending criminals. Of course he generally "got them off" through some flaws in the indictments or on "points of law" that the prosecuting attorneys were not familiar with.

One of his sharp pointed cases was that of a burglar, who, getting short of false door keys, sought to replenish his stock one morning by going through one of the streets of Lowell, and taking the keys from the shop and store doors. Finding one store door ajar, with its key in it, he took it out, put it into his pocket and ran away. The owner of the place happened to be behind the door, unseen by the burglar, reading a newspaper, and he started after the criminal in hot pursuit. The culprit stumbled and fell, but before he could rise to his feet he was nabbed by a cop and locked up. The prosecuting attorney, who knew him, thought that at last he had a sure case against the fellow and had him indicted for larceny. The burglar's wife employed Butler, who had then acquired a great reputation as a criminal lawyer, to defend him. In the trial of the case, Butler was asked by an elder member of the bar, why he took such cases, when he knew that he was sure to be beaten. "Oh, it is a way I have," he answered.

After the testimony for the state had been given, Butler asked the court to discharge the prisoner on the ground that the key being in its lock when taken was a part of the real estate, and as real estate couldn't be stolen, the indictment could not be sustained. The judge allowed Butler's motion and the prisoner was discharged. This case fully illustrates General Butler's methods in his practice of criminal law.

In one of his cases, where notice of the suit had to be published, the clerk, a Whig, asked in what paper it should be printed. Butler named a Gen. Jackson democratic sheet.

"I don't know such a paper," said the clerk. To this, Butler retorted:

"Pray, Mr. Clerk, do not interrupt the proceedings of the court, for if you begin to tell us what you don't know, there will be no time for anything else."

At a later time, when sharply cross examining a witness, the opposing counsel reminded Butler that the witness was a professor in Harvard College. To this he promptly replied, "I am aware of it, your honor. We hung one of them the other day."

Butler stated that he always, while preparing his own side of a suit, took into consideration, so far as possible, what the other side would be expected to prove. And he said this, which every good lawyer ought carefully to consider. "In fine, a lawyer who sits in his office and prepares his cases, only by the statements of those who are brought to him, will be very likely to be beaten."

And this was the reason that some of those I have written about—one particularly—who through good counselors acquired the reputation of being poor jury lawyers.

No paid surgeon as a witness in an intricate case, ever got the better of Ben Butler on cross examination while trying to shield an unfortunate brother of his profession, in a matter of malpractice. Butler in such cases studied them exhaustively till he mastered all the questions that would be likely to be brought up at the trial. The surgeon who would go upon the stand with the purpose of trying to make out a case to shield the surgeon defendant, when the actual facts would not bear out his testimony in chief, found before Butler got through with him on cross examination that his questoner knew enough to expose him.

In one murder trial on a technicality he had the charge against the criminal reduced from murder to manslaughter and Butler told his client that he had a narrow escape and ought to be very thankful for it. To this the fellow replied that he wished he had been sentenced to be hanged. Butler was vexed and retorted, "I wish you had let me know your preference a few hours ago and I would have accommodated you."

Butler early took to politics as naturally as a duck to water. Long before he was twenty-one, he espoused the democratic faith—"not that of Jefferson" embodied in the Virginia Resolutions of '98, leaving the nation's frame of government virtually a conglomeration of states . . . each of which should conduct for itself every substantial function of government, but that of Gen. Andrew Jackson, whose ringing declaration that "the Union must and should be preserved" which stirred the North like a trumpet blast and he wrote that "I had early sense enough to see that it conflicted . . . with the teachings of Jefferson."

Lowell, the second largest New England city, in Butler's time, was first a Whig city and later a Republican stronghold. In the last quarter of century like Boston on account of its large foreign element, it has been a democratic city. With Butler's views, he stood little chance of public preferment. The mill operatives were then working fourteen hours a day with half an hour off for dinner. Butler thought that ten hours with an hour off at noon was long enough for any man or woman to labor in the mills, whether he started the movement for a ten hour day does not appear, but he became its champion in trying to get an act through the legislature to establish such a working day. It was several years, however, before the proposition was enacted into law. He was many times nominated as representative to the General Court, but had only a minority of votes and in all these contests, he had, as he states, the opposition of the wealthy and blue blooded gentry, of his own party, whether democrats or republicans.

Butler had a hand in the election of Charles Sumner to the United States Senate in 1851. The following was what he said about the Presidential election of 1856, "The democrats nominated James Buchanan and he was elected by a very meager majority if at all, for I have always believed that he owed his election to a fraudulent return or count of votes in the state of Pennsylvania."

Butler went as a Stephen A. Douglas delegate to the national democratic convention in 1860 at Charleston, S. C. He stated that he met Douglas in Washington and told him he couldn't be nominated, but Douglas thought he would be. He asked Butler to vote for him three times before he changed his vote, but he promised to vote for Douglas five times. When the convention met, a good sized row was on and after a stormy time, during which Butler had voted for Jeff Davis 57 times, the convention adjourned to reconvene at Baltimore, where Douglas was nominated for President. The Southern democrats bolted and nominated John C. Breckenridge of Kentucky, whom Butler supported and ran as a candidate for governor and received some 6,000 votes out of nearly 170,000.

Butler said he saw Breckenridge before his nomination and he declared that he was opposed to secession yet later he commanded a corps in the Confederate army.

The abuse that was heaped upon Butler "for thirty years" he endeavored to justify by quoting some of Horace Greeley's strange statements in the New York Tribune, after Lincoln's election, to pacify the South. "It is needless, perhaps, for me," he stated, "to say I did not believe in Horace Greeley's statesmanship or teachings in 1860 nor before or after."

After the war in 1866, he was elected to Congress as a Republican from the Essex district of Massachusetts, where he had a summer "tent on the beach" for a residence. His service during the term was notable for his advicacy of the greenbacks, which had been issued by the government as a war measure as a permanent national currency and the impeachment of Andrew Johnson. But when he came up for re-election, a split was organized in the party and Richard H. Dana, Jr., author of "Two Years Before the Mast" who prided himself on his ancestry and wealth" was selected to do him up, but he received so few votes that Butler did not regard it as necessary to polish him off with his pen as was his wont to those who opposed him. In 1874, two years after the disastrous Greeley campaign, a great reaction having set in, a democratic Congress was elected and Butler was one of the defeated congressmen. Two years later he was a candidate in his own—the Lowell district. Another split in the party was organized by the same class which had always opposed him and E. Rockwood Hoar, a former Congressman, and an Attorney General in Gen. Grant's cabinet, was put forward to run as an independent republican, but its object failed. Butler was so indignant at Hoar's candidacy that he caused his nomination as a Justice of the Supreme Court to be rejected by the Senate.

Butler determined to be governor of Massachusetts, but the class that had always opposed him was equally determined that he shouldn't be. They could prevent his being nominated by the republicans and did so. Butler regarded the matter as a personal affair and set about accomplishing his purpose and in 1878 he ran as an independent candidate for governor. By this he reduced the republican majority in the state. From his new position it was an easy slide into the democratic party. In 1880 he voted for Gen. Winfield S. Hancock for President. In 1882 he was elected by the democrats as Governor. During his one year in office, he so thoroughly "stirred up the monkeys" that he was defeated for re-election. In 1884 he bolted the nomination of Grover Cleveland for President and ran himself as the greenback candidate with the covert purpose of securing the election of James G. Blaine. This would have been accomplished if Rev. Mr. Burchard hadn't "spilled the beans" by his "Rum, Romanism and Rebellion" declaration at a great political meeting in New York city. Also, if a big snow storm hadn't occurred in northern New York, which kept thousands of Republican voters from the polls. Butler with the help of John Kelly, the slugger, was preparing to show that thousands of his votes were fraudulently counted for Cleveland, when Kelly died and the scheme collapsed. The country at large had no stomach for a second cont out. One fraud in the White House—Rutherford B. Hayes—was enough for all the ages to come. The Presidential election of 1884 closed the erratic and personal political career of Benj. Butler.

AT CAMP CHICKAMAUGA

Charles F. Morse, 8 Water Street, Norway, submits an article in The National Tribune, Washington, D. C., with the Caption "At Camp Chickamauga", which he affirms is a correct description of affairs at the park in Virginia during the Spanish-American war.

Mr. Morse enlisted in Company D, 1st Me. Regt., which went from Norway to Augusta for mobilization. The company was at war strength when he arrived in camp, so he transferred to Co. K and was with that outfit as long as the regiment remained in the south.

"Chicamauga, June 4, 1898. Very dry and hot. The dust in camp is becoming almost unbearable." The above extract from my diary recalls conditions along the Lafayette Road in Chickamauga Park, where my regiment (the 16th Pa.) was in camp during the Summer of 1898. There were, of course, no improved roads in those days and the thin clay soil prevailing in this part of Georgia was soon ground to flour-like surface dressing by the constant drilling and maneuvering of troops. This dust mulch was kept so stirred up and agitated by the steady stream of mule teams hauling supplies from Lytle Station as well as by the heavy traffic of tourists and sightseers from Chattanooga and elsewhere that the entire camp seemed to be enveloped in a thin, yellowish fog. Chickamauga Park, with its dust cloud, was like a county fair, a harvest-home picnic, and a Holy Roller camp meeting all rolled into one and many, many times enlarged.

Water was scarce and obtained only from drilled wells. Baths were largely dispensed with, except as we had opportunity to take a plunge in Chickamauga Creek, a considerable distance away. Hot Water was unknown except in the cook tent. After each mess we cleaned our pans, tin cups, etc., by scouring with sand and leaves.

But under date of Sunday, June 12, there was another story. I find in my diary: "Heavy thunderstorms this forenoon and this evening there was a cloudburst. Camp grounds flooded."

How it could rain at Chickamauga! No halfway measures; no sprinkles or drizzles, but cloudbursts, downpours. On this occasion our sink holes soon overflowed and the sewage floated hither and thither along with bedding from the mule corrals. Our mules were not stabled, but quartered in the open.

The next morning it was sultry and hot again and we were all busy policing our grounds. We got things cleaned up by noon in good shape, except for the overflow from those open trenches and sink holes, and in a few days the dust was flying again.

My comrades, who were encamped at Chickamauga remember the crudeness of camp conditions and I speak of them now only by way of reminiscence. But to other readers I will say that at Chickamauga in 1898 we had no cantonments; no bunk houses, no sewage system, no running water, no toilets, no bathtubs nor shower baths, no movies, no lectures, no entertainment, no milk, butter or ice. Camp conditions in 1898 were practically the same as in the days of the Civil War. —J. B. Askey, 1409 S. Main St., Findlay, Ohio.

EYESIGHT

EYES OF TODAY

Seventy people out of every one hundred have defective eyesight, and this is not because eyes are being made "poorer" than they were in grandfather's day, either.

Our present mode of living, with confining work, insufficient exercise and too many hours spent with artificial lights throws a load on the eyes which they were never intended to carry. As a result, more and more people need the comforting help of glasses for eyes which have been overworked.

Do not put off giving your eyes the attention they deserve. It is more than likely they need it now.

Consider the many advantages of the New Firestone Oldfield. These tires are not "second-line tires." Their high quality is equal to other "first lines" by actual test. Finer cotton means a stronger and better carcass. More rubber between the plies gives better protection to the cords, longer life and greater flexibility.

Now all debate about Gasoline Quality is settled

It's Here Today

Socony Special plus Ethyl

TWO YEARS ago we introduced Socony Special—a superior high-compression gasoline. Thousands of motorists discovered that it was far better than other gasolines, and gladly paid a premium for it.

The sales mounted. Perhaps we should have been satisfied, but we were not. We said: "Is there anything that we can possibly do to make Socony Special still better?"

There was one thing. We could add Ethyl fluid to it.

Ethyl fluid is an anti-knock preparation that makes any gasoline better. Even a poor gasoline can be given "zero knock-rating" if enough Ethyl fluid is added. But a poor gasoline with a zero knock-rating is still a poor gasoline.

Never before in New York and New England has Ethyl fluid been added to a gasoline of Socony Special quality. We decided—at extra cost to ourselves, but no extra cost to you—to do what had never been done. Today for the first time you can buy Socony Special plus Ethyl, at the same price that you have been paying for Socony Special alone. The gasoline debate is settled. We guarantee that in anti-knock quality, in smooth performance, in pick-up, in everything that you want in a gasoline, the new Socony Special (with Ethyl) is better than any gasoline you have ever used.

Test It for Just One Week

We urge you not to lose a single day in trying this amazing new motor fuel. By all means give it a fair and honest trial. Make sure your tank is empty, or nearly empty, so that your motor will get the full benefit of this new Socony Special.

Use it for a week. Check your pick-up and power. Note the smooth operation and complete control. At the end of a week you'll be convinced. From then on, no other gasoline will ever do.

PARIS HILL

Jackson Reunion

The descendants of Lemuel Jackson, Jr. the first settler of Paris held their second reunion on Saturday, August 17, 1929, at Commings Hall, Paris Hill. Mrs. Kate Jackson Hammond was hostess. A bountiful picnic dinner a la cafeteria was partaken of at noon.

In the afternoon a pilgrimage was made to the old house, the first frame building erected in Paris that bears the date 1789 on the gable facing the street. The lady renting the house for the summer, came to the porch and invited them to enter and see the old rooms. Directly facing the front was a most interesting book room with shelves along three sides, all the way to the floor, nearly lined with old books gathered for years by the owners of the house. One particularly interesting was the old family Bible. The old kitchen with it's fireplace and crane and ovens was another interesting room, and then up a short flight of stairs was a little landing that one had to step onto and then down into an old bedroom. This landing was on hinges so that it could be folded back to the side of the stairs when not in use. It was a privilege to be allowed to go through the quaint home and thanks is due our courteous hostess living there who made it possible for us to do so.

From the old house the pilgrimage led to the old burying ground, where, after much wandering and climbing over bushes and brakes we came to the old tomb stone, marking the spot where the first old settler and his two wives lie.

Returning to the Hall a business meeting was held and the following officers elected:

Pres.—S. I. Jackson.
Vice Pres.—Mrs. Lottie Gates.
Sec. and Treas.—Henry Stone.
Committee on the next Reunion in 1930—Mrs. Ed Jackson, Mechanic Falls; Mrs. Angie Scribner, Paris; Mrs. Rust Jackson, Norway, and Mrs. Jessie Andrews, Woodstock.

Mrs. Addie Stone invited them all to meet with her on Stearns Hill next year. A large group picture was taken on the grounds in front of the church and then a program of readings by Sabrina Jackson and Angie Scribner, and orchestra music by Shem's Orchestra of West Paris was enjoyed. Madeline Emery, piano; Keith Emery, trap and drums; Stanley Andrews, violin; and Henry Stone, saxaphone; all cousins and descendants.

Those present were Mrs. Sabrina Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose Swift, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Richardson and daughter, Frances, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Jackson, Mrs. Kate Hammond, Mrs. Florence Cole, Mrs. Geo. F. Robinson, Mrs. Addie Stone, Mr. and Mrs. Rust Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. Foster Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. S. I. Jackson and daughter, Eva Marion, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Jackson and sons, Alpheus and Arthur, and daughter, Beatrice, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Gates, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Gates and son, Raymond, Mrs. Chas. Marshall, Mrs. Dan Hill and son, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Jackson, Will Jackson, Dr. and Mrs. James Glover, Mrs. Fred Scribner, Mrs. Jessie Andrews and a son, Stanley, Miss Emery, Keith Emery, Henry Stone. The Greatest success in all Buick history

More people have purchased New Buicks during the past two weeks than in any similar period of any previous year

The New Buick with Body by Fisher has met with a veritable landslide of public demand. many purchased before ever seeing the car—many thousands of others placed their orders the first few days it was on display—other thousands have been taking demonstrations and then making Buick their choice.
